

Meredith Roberts is the Director of External Relations at Sierra Energy, a technology start-up that turns trash into energy without creating toxic byproducts. Meredith earned her B.S. in Entomology at University of California, Davis, and has been in the environmental field for over 15 years working in business development, strategic planning, communication and fundraising for both the private and non-profit sectors.

Meredith currently serves as the Ambassador Committee chair with a primary focus of supporting membership initiatives and new member services. As co-chief last year she helped grow the team with several new committee members and aims to continue this into 2019. She also serves on the NEXT young professional committee for the Chamber and is dedicated to connecting rising stars with opportunities in the Davis business community. Originally from the Philadelphia region, she has continued to stay engaged in watershed protection work and trash cleanup efforts there, while at the same time growing her volunteer activities here in the Sacramento region.
